

Your Oakden Rise Community Network Questions, Answered

Oakden Rise is among the first developments in South Australia to implement an integrated community energy model. So what is it, and how does it benefit you as a resident of Oakden Rise?

What is the Oakden Rise Community Energy Network?

It is a dedicated community energy network powered by ASENSO and Sustainable Asset Co. It has been designed specifically for the community and allows the network to support cleaner energy and future technology over time.

Who is ASENSO?

Australian Sustainable Embedded Network Operation, or ASENSO is proudly 100% Australian owned and operated, with the purpose of powering a better future for Australia. They are a leading provider of affordable, sustainable solutions to communities, including solar, batteries, recycled plastics products, and other innovative solutions. ASENSO is the retail provider of the Oakden Rise Community Energy Co.

Where is the energy sourced from?

The renewable energy is sourced from Lake Bonney Wind Farm in South Australia.

Does 100% Green Power cost extra?

Not a cent. Every home at Oakden Rise receives 100% GreenPower at no extra cost.

Can I add solar panels or a battery?

Yes, subject to the relevant approval and connection process. The network has been designed to support future energy technology, including solar and battery solutions over time.

Am I protected as a customer?

Yes. ASENSO, the brand behind Oakden Rise Community Energy Co is an Authorised Electricity Retailer governed by the same Energy Regulators Legislation as other retailers, and customers receive the standard protections that apply to electricity customers in South Australia.

Is there a community battery?

Not at this stage. The network has been designed so future energy technology, including a community battery, can be considered over time. If this progresses, residents will be provided with further information.
